On 19-8, the enemy troops from LIB-375 under MOC-9, based in Hplayhsalo Camp and active in the area summoned and told the village elders that if they came under attack by the rebels, all the Hplayhsalo villagers would be sent away to Bayanathi (exiled to a far away place).

On 27-8, the same enemy troops summoned Hplayhsalo villagers, a person from each household, and took some to the beetle-nut plantations and forests outside the village. Some were left in the schoolyard. Those taken to the plantations were forced to clear landmines and clear brushes around the camp. The villagers, having to go with the troops, had to sleep in the jungles and in the rain, without food supply. These same troops extorted rice enough for them for one week, from Hplayhsalo villagers

On 1-9, these same troops shot at a villager, whom they found walking in a beetle-nut plantation, wounding him in the left hand and leg. The villager was a half-wit. These troops have made very difficult the life of the villagers, who have to live in constant fear, up to this day.
